MANAGER'S REVIEW

Investment background

In February equity markets gave back some of January's gains (MSCI ACWI -2.9% total return in USD). Good news became bad news, in a sense – demand is now perceived as too strong because this will make it harder to bring down inflation, potentially requiring more restrictive interest rates than financial markets had been pricing in. Strength of demand is particularly evident from the US consumer, but you could make an argument that consumer spending has surprised on the upside even in the countries perceived as most challenged by a cost-of-living crisis, such as the UK. If this sounds contrary to what we wrote last month, it should! The current backdrop has echoes of the famous Mankoff (New Yorker Magazine) cartoon from 1981: "On Wall Street today, news of lower interest rates sent the stock market up, but then the expectation that these rates would be inflationary sent the stock market down, until the realization (sic) that lower rates might stimulate the sluggish economy pushed the market up, before it ultimately went down on fears that an overheated economy would lead to a reimposition of higher interest rates."

Strategy update

Performance

The fund returned -0.1%¹ in February versus -0.5%² by its comparator benchmark, the MSCI ACWI index (all in EUR).

Our key factors were mixed during the month with the return of economic and interest rate uncertainty undermining the returns to value, recovery and smaller companies. Stock picking was reasonably robust, offsetting some factor drags.

Positive contributors during the month were mainly driven by strong results and spread through a number of different sectors and geographies such as Draftkings (+28%), Meta Platforms (+19%), Rolls Royce (+37%), Iveco (+18%), iQIYI (+17%), Eurobank Ergasias (+16%) and Danieli (+11%).

Underperformers were led by not owning Tesla and Apple and having an underweight position in NVIDIA, all three rallying.

Activity

The market continues to pay quite full prices for certainty stocks (low volatility streams of profits and cash flow) and double discounted valuations for uncertainty stocks (any companies where there is a risk to short term profits and cash flow). The great thing at the moment is that the latter covers a very wide range of stocks, from deep value to high quality (but a bit cyclical), to fast growth (but uncertain short-term delivery), so my investable universe is very large.

There was not a huge amount of activity last month. We are well positioned for a continued return to value, better performance from 'uncertainty' stocks, a return to form of small and mid-caps and a much better environment for consumer and industrial cyclicals as cost-of-living pressures roll-over. A new addition to the portfolio was Wartsila, which provides marine propulsion technology and is a high scoring recovery stock with close to trough margins as well as close to trough EV/Sales multiples. Wartsila has useful structural tailwinds for demand over the long term. Its efficient engines will help decarbonise marine transport, with a decent order cycle likely as fuel conversions come in over the next decade, and its battery business (systems integration) will be a major beneficiary of government stimulus behind green energy, such as the US Inflation Reduction Act and its European equivalent. This revenue growth, alongside the lagged effect of pricing to recover cost inflation and some one-off costs in 2022 dropping out this year should see operating margins recover from last year's 4% to double-digit levels in time (the company targets 12%). The shares currently trade on ~10x recovered earnings compared to a long-run average of ~15x so we don't see this recovery as being priced into the shares.

We sold out of Marriot International, Heijmans and Subsea7 following strong performance.

Outlook

Investors should be under no illusions that we are in a different market regime to 2010-20, with a higher resting heart-rate for interest rates (and by extension the cost of capital) and more volatility around inflation. Valuation dispersion – a measure of the bang for your buck you get for buying cheaper stocks over more expensive – is at high levels across the world, which is an attractive environment in which to be a valuation-focused stock picker. The fundamentals of last cycle's darlings, particularly some large constituents of equity benchmarks (and by extension many passive portfolios), have weakened while many cheaper stocks and sectors, such as banks and energy, are performing better. Certain equities are much further through the process of adjustment to the intermediate outlook than others, allowing scope for stock picking alpha.

My Recovery Funds have been launched and run by me at River and Mercantile for 15 years (UK Recovery) and 10 years (Global Recovery) and have compounded out at double digit rates and been decently ahead of their multi-cap benchmarks. We have applied the same approach consistently over that long period of time, it's worked more often than not, our readers should know what they are getting. They should also know that I am excited about the opportunities from here as our investment factors are just starting to out-perform again and we have lots of good companies where valuations are low and where on average newsflow is starting to beat depressed expectations. Generating long term wealth for you, your clients and your family, that is what it's about!
